

Scene 1: "So rare, unforgettable / So soft, indescribable / Can't help but think that this is, this is finite"

- Shot Type: Wide Shot (Establishing)
- Description: Megan stands alone, back to the camera, facing a vibrant bed of peonies or a particularly striking floral display in the botanical garden. The light is soft, possibly golden hour, casting gentle rays. She's contemplative, taking in the beauty around her.
- Movement: Static, or a very slow, subtle zoom in on Megan.

Scene 2: "You tell me you're not ready and I keep my voice steady"

- Shot Type: Medium Close-Up
- Description: Megan's profile, looking off into the distance, a slight pensive or wistful expression on her face. Her hair might be gently illuminated by soft light. The background is a soft blur of vibrant flowers, keeping the focus on her emotions.
- Movement: Static, or a very gentle, almost imperceptible pan to slowly follow her gaze, emphasizing her thoughtful state.

Scene 3: "Run my fingers through your hair"

- Shot Type: Medium Close-Up (Focus on Implied Connection)
- Description: Megan is sitting on a bench or a low wall, looking down at a blooming peony. Her hand is delicately hovering just above the petals, almost touching them, mirroring the "run my fingers through your hair" lyric by showing a tender, restrained interaction with something precious. The background is a soft outline of the garden.
- Movement: A slow, gentle push-in from a slightly wider shot to focus on Megan's hand and face as she interacts with the flower. The movement is steady and unhurried.

Scene 4: "Because peonies only bloom in May / I catch myself hoping she'll stay / Hoping she will stay / I've never held one like her..."

- Shot Type: Extreme Close-Up (Focus on a Peony)
- Description: A single, perfect peony bloom fills the frame. The focus is entirely on its delicate petals and intricate structure, outlined simply to highlight its form. The background is a very soft, abstract blur of simple lines, drawing all attention to the flower itself.
- Movement: A very slow, almost imperceptible dolly zoom out to reveal a small cluster of similarly outlined flowers around it, or a gentle, unhurried pan across the petals, emphasizing their texture.

Scene 5: "I catch myself hoping she'll stay"

- Shot Type: Medium Shot
- Description: Megan is depicted sitting gracefully on a garden bench or a stone wall, or perhaps kneeling gently beside a flowerbed. Her gaze is directed towards a cluster of peonies (or other prominent garden flowers), and one of her hands is softly resting near them, though not necessarily touching. Her expression is thoughtful, perhaps a touch wistful, conveying a sense of longing. The background maintains a soft, outlined garden feel.
- Movement: Slowly pan in from a slightly wider shot of her and the flowers to a medium shot, subtly focusing on her face and the contemplative pose of her hand near the blooms.

Scene 6: "So new and colourful / She's brave, so curious / It's only obvious she gets to own this verse"

- Shot Type: Close-Up (Megan's Face, with a sense of wonder)
- Description: Megan's face is in focus, angled slightly as she looks upwards or off-camera with wide, curious eyes and a genuine, gentle smile. Her expression conveys discovery and fascination. Her curly hair frames her face beautifully. The background is a very soft, abstract outline of foliage, ensuring full attention is on her expressive face.
- Movement: A slow, deliberate push-in shot

Scene 7: (Continuing) "So new and colourful / She's brave, so curious / It's only obvious she gets to own this verse"

- Shot Type: Medium Shot (Following Action)
- Description: Megan is walking slowly and gracefully along a winding garden path, her head subtly turning as she observes different plants, flowers, or architectural features. She might gently reach out a hand to lightly brush against a leaf or a low-hanging bloom. The path and surrounding garden elements are simply outlined, emphasizing her movement within the space.
- Movement: A smooth, steady tracking shot, following her from slightly behind or to the side. The camera maintains a consistent, almost gliding motion as she explores, highlighting her curiosity and interaction with the environment.

Scene 8: "I crave more time with you / Before Winter says we're through / I shiver when she calls my name"

- Shot Type: Medium Shot (Reflective, Dappled Light/Shadow)

- Description: Megan is standing or sitting near a section of the garden that feels slightly less vibrant, perhaps where some of the blooms are fading, or under a trellis creating more distinct shadows. Her posture is slightly more inward, and her expression holds a hint of melancholy or contemplation, suggesting the impending "Winter." The interplay of light and shadow is subtly indicated by varying line weight, with the background elements simply outlined.
- Movement: A slow zoom out (or simply moving the iPhone slowly backwards) to reveal more of the slightly less lush surroundings, subtly symbolizing the approach of a less vibrant time. The movement is smooth and deliberate.

Scene 9 (continue 2): "I crave more time with you / Before Winter says we're through"

- Shot Type: Close-Up (Hands and Fading Bloom)
- Description: This shot focuses purely on Megan's hands. She is holding a single, beautiful peony, but it's subtly shown to be slightly past its prime - perhaps a petal or two gently falling, or a slight wilting indicated by the simple outlines. Her fingers are delicately cradling the flower, emphasizing its preciousness and fragility. The background is a very soft, abstract outline of other fading garden elements.
- Movement: Static, or a very slow, subtle zoom in on the flower and Megan's hands, highlighting the delicate act of holding and the flower's fleeting beauty.

Scene 10: (Outro begins) "Won't you stay with me for as long as you'll have me, I promise you'll be free / Stay with me for as long as you'll have me, I promise you'll be free"

- Shot Type: Medium Close-Up (Hopeful Plea)
- Description: Megan is gently turning her head and body slightly towards the camera (implying towards the narrator or the viewer), making soft eye contact. Her expression holds a mix of gentle hope and a lingering touch of melancholy. She is surrounded by a cluster of the beautiful, outlined peony blooms, symbolizing the preciousness of the moment. Her curly hair frames her face as she looks directly, conveying a sense of asking or quiet invitation.

- Movement: A very slow, steady push-in, gradually bringing her face and expression into sharper focus, holding on her eyes as she makes this silent plea.

Scene 11: (Outro continues) "I've never held one like her, / Never held one like her / There's never been one like her."

- Shot Type: Extreme Close-Up (Lingering Bloom)
- Description: A single, exceptionally beautiful peony bloom fills the frame. It's a pristine, vibrant example of the flower, perhaps with a subtle dewdrop outlined on a petal, or a very faint suggestion of a gentle breeze causing a slight ruffle. The background is an extremely soft, abstract blur of simple lines, ensuring the focus remains entirely on the singular beauty of this specific flower. It looks perfect, yet inherently fleeting.
- Movement: Static shot, allowing the subtle details of the flower to be the sole focus. If any movement, it's an almost imperceptible natural sway, captured gently.
